Two friends

It was a hot day. Hassan and Ibrahim were walking across the desert to an oasis. The boys were friends, but today they were arguing. Hassan was very angry. 'Ibrahim, you are so stupid!' Hassan yelled.

Ibrahim felt hurt and upset. He stopped and wrote in the sand, 'Today my friend yelled at me.'

Hassan read the words that Ibrahim wrote in the sand. He felt sorry, but he didn't say anything.

The two boys walked on. Soon they came to the cool green oasis, with trees, birds and a waterhole. Ibrahim jumped in the deep water to cool off. Suddenly, Hassan saw that Ibrahim was in trouble. 'Oh no,' thought Hassan. 'Ibrahim is in deep water and he can't swim!' He shouted, 'Stay calm, Ibrahim. I'm coming to help you.' Hassan swam quickly to Ibrahim. He helped Ibrahim get back to the shore.

'Thank you, Hassan,' said Ibrahim. Ibrahim picked up his knife. He carved these words into a rock: 'Today my friend saved my life.'

'I don't understand,' said Hassan. 'When I called you stupid, you wrote the words in the sand. But when I helped you, you carved the words in a rock.'

Ibrahim smiled at Hassan. 'When a friend is unkind, we should write the words in the sand so the wind can blow the words away. When a friend is kind, we should carve the words in a rock so we can remember the kindness for ever.'

'You are very wise, Ibrahim,' said Hassan. 'I'm sorry I was unkind. Thank you for being my friend.'

The Boy and the Wolf

Once upon a time there was a young boy who looked after the sheep in his village. He didn't like looking after the sheep because he stayed on his own on the hill and it was very boring. He looked at the village and he said to himself, 'The people in the village are all together there and can talk, and I'm all alone here. I want to have some fun.'

Then he thought, 'I know how to have some fun!' And he shouted, 'Wolf! Wolf! Help! The wolf is taking the sheep!'

The villagers were very busy but they came running up the hill to find the boy and help him, 'Where is the wolf?' they said. But the boy only laughed. 'There is no wolf, I only wanted to laugh,' said the boy, and the villagers were very angry.

The next day the boy was bored again. 'I want to have some fun,' he said to himself and he shouted, 'Wolf! Wolf! He's taking our sheep! Come and help me!' And the villagers came running but they were very angry when they saw there was no wolf, and they told him to stop being silly.

That night, the boy was all alone on the hill and he suddenly saw two eyes in the darkness. It was the wolf! He shouted and shouted for help but the villagers didn't come. The next day he went down to the village and said, 'The wolf took all our sheep, why didn't you come to help me?' And the villagers said, 'Because no one believes a liar.' He felt very bad and he didn't lie again.

1- Why did the boy lie to the villagers?

2- Why were the villagers angry?

.....

3- Did the boy lie again?
